

BLACKLIST ISSUE STILL UNDECIDED

BRITISH NOTE DEFENDING POLICY WILL BE BASIS FOR FURTHER EXCHANGES BETWEEN COUNTRIES.

NOTE UNSATISFACTORY

Viscount Grey Insists That Purpose Is to Shorten War and Not Boost British Trade at Expense of Neutrals.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Further negotiations between the American and British governments over American objection to Great Britain's trade restrictions were considered today. A British reply to the latest American protest made public last night by the state department, defends the British position and leaves open the door for further exchanges.

Purpose to Shorten the War.

Great Britain's defense of the blacklist declares the measure is purely a military regulation, denies its purpose is to shorten the war. "The feelings which I venture to think have prompted the note," the foreign minister declares in the British reply, "must have been that the measure will be expanded to an extent which will result in their later, perhaps also that they are not exclusively designed for belligerent purposes, but rather an attempt to forward our common interests at a time of neutral commerce, and that they are, from a military point of view, unnecessary."

Even these conclusions, it is asserted, are not the foreign minister's. The measure will not be extended further than is absolutely necessary, declares the note. It is strictly a military measure, and says that the British government is in a position to neglect any just means to bring about its termination.

Neutral Trade Not Target.

The note is based largely on the argument that there is no assumption by Great Britain of power to interfere with neutral traders, but that the blacklist is a matter of municipal law, affecting only persons found to be assisting or rendering service to the enemy. It disclaims any intention of imposing disabilities or penalties on neutrals, and declares that it is "not a measure which we are prepared to believe," it says, "that the United States government intends to challenge the right of Great Britain as a sovereign state to prohibit persons from trading with those who owe her allegiance when such prohibition is found necessary in the public interest." It says that the protest which your excellency has handed to me has been founded on a misconception of the scope and intent of the measures which have been taken.

Not Like a Blockade.

The note says the British government readily admits that the blacklist is a measure of municipal law, but that the United States must also admit the right of one belligerent to stop this trade by land and sea. It says that the United States government is not in a position to challenge the right of one belligerent to stop this trade by land and sea. It says that the United States government is not in a position to challenge the right of one belligerent to stop this trade by land and sea.

Will Limit its Scope.

Answering the American contention that there is a serious danger to neutral commerce generally in the British ability to extend the list where it seems expedient, the note says that the United States government is not in a position to challenge the right of one belligerent to stop this trade by land and sea. It says that the United States government is not in a position to challenge the right of one belligerent to stop this trade by land and sea.

As to British Coal.

Referring to exclusion from ships using British coal in carrying goods belonging to blacklisted firms, the note argues that there can be no legal objection to such a restriction, which is necessary for the use of British coal to carriage of goods to persons active in assisting Great Britain's enemies. It points to the destruction of tonnage by German submarines in view of the German government's refusal to question the British coal supply should be conserved to be certain that there is enough for ships supplying the British relief commission.

The note discusses the argument that there is apprehension that potential control of transportation by the nation might be used to disrupt the

LOSS WILL BE HEAVY TO TEUTONS

ENGLISH ADVANCE ON WEST FRONT DESCRIBED BY ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN ADMITS DEFEAT

Fighting Heavy on the Other Fronts—Both Sides Claim Advantages in the Bitter Fighting Reported.

With the British army in France, Nov. 15.—The British advance along both sides of the Andre, which continued yesterday, with the capture of the village of Beaucourt, is considered by the British commanders as one of the most important successes of the last month of the offensive. They insist especially on the relatively insignificant character of the German resistance in a position which they consider of great strategic importance, and one of the most highly fortified on the entire western front.

More than 5,000 Prisoners have been collected in the extensive subterranean galleries and chambers which were sunk on both sides of the valley and were miles in extent. Five hundred Germans surrendered in a tunnel near St. Pierre Division, which was a mile and a half long.

This tunnel gave access to scores of electric lighted chambers in which companies of German troops were housed, and which contained quantities of machine guns and bombs. Another seven hundred prisoners were caught in a ravine south of Beaumont-lez-Loup, which were cut off by the first attack on Monday afternoon.

The British success south of the Andre was increased owing to the fact that the German position was in a position of being relieved by fresh troops when the attack was launched. The result was that twice the normal strength of the garrison was trapped by the British advance.

Prisoners taken here were many men of the 53rd Infantry, of which the Duke of Albany is honorary colonel and chief of the regiment last evening. The majority of the prisoners, they said, were taken from the front line. The British swarmed over the surface between trench lines and hurled showers of bombs into German dug-outs and shelters, capturing many of the main German trenches at Beaumont and Laucourt.

Prisoners from the Prussian Guards told the Associated Press that they had seen the British machine gun bombardment destroyed the machine gun emplacement and made resistance to the infantry charges impossible. They said they were cut off from their reserve on the entire front of seven miles. They declared they were glad to surrender, and that they were glad to see the British machine gun positions at the bottom of the valley south of the Andre, was attacked with bombs by the Germans, who swarmed over the surface between trench lines and hurled showers of bombs into German dug-outs and shelters, capturing many of the main German trenches at Beaumont and Laucourt.

Two-thirds of the British casualties south of Andre were walking wounded. The total losses were lighter in proportion than in any previous operation of the past four months. The British attack was pressed continuously last night. All ground was captured in quick succession, and the German troops were pushing beyond Feenele. The Germans so far have not attempted any counter attack.

German Advance. An important German counter offensive began at six this morning against French positions south of the Somme. Abancourt and Thaulieu were attacked. The Germans attacked desperately, the war office said, using burning liquid. The official announcement says the Germans were repulsed everywhere excepting Freesville, where they reached a group of ruined houses.

Announce Repulse. Berlin, Nov. 15.—Furious Russian attacks were made yesterday on the front south of Lemberg, along the Narayevka river. The Russian assaults were repulsed.

Rumanian Invasion. Berlin, Nov. 15.—Invasion of Rumania is being carried on successfully by the Austrians and Germans, the war office says. Engagements along the road leading into the Transylvania (southeastern Rumania) yesterday resulted in a successful advance by the Rumanians, who took more than 1,800 prisoners.

NO PROTEST BY U. S. TO GERMANY'S PLAN TO DEPORT BELGIANS

American Charge at Berlin Merely Instructed to Discuss Matter With Chancellor in Interest of Belgian People.

WILSON AS MEDIATOR

Declares He Can See No Reason Why American President Should Not Be Acceptable to All Parties in the Conflict.

Washington, Nov. 15.—An announcement last night of the department action in instructing American Charge of Affairs Grew, at Berlin, to communicate with the German foreign office on the subject of the deportation of Belgians brought out a flood of inquiries today for details and explanation of the department's action. Secretary Lansing repeated the department's action as it went out in last night's Associated Press dispatches, and made this statement: "The United States has not made an official protest to Germany but has suggested to her what the bad effect on neutral opinion, particularly in the United States, such action might have. The instructions to Charge of Affairs Grew to discuss the matter with Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg were sent at the suggestion of the Belgian government, whose interest in the deportation of Belgians is plain. The American action was not meant in any sense to be a criticism of the German government's policy. We do not know the facts of the situation and cannot form a judgment until we have heard from them."

SEEK CHANGE TO END WAR THIS WINTER

COUNT APPONYI, FORMER PREMIER AND HUNGARIAN LEADER, CLAIMS PEACE PROSPECTS ARE NOT RE-MOTE.

WILSON AS MEDIATOR

Declares He Can See No Reason Why American President Should Not Be Acceptable to All Parties in the Conflict.

Berlin via London, Nov. 15.—The opening of peace negotiations may perhaps be expected with fair prospect of success in the course of the coming winter, according to Count Albert Apponyi, veteran Hungarian leader, and former Hungarian premier. Count Apponyi, who is visiting Germany to deliver the address on Hungarian history, expressed his views in an interview given to a correspondent of the Associated Press, in which he discussed the general European situation.

Peace Prospects Bright.

"We cannot expect," he said, "to see peace negotiations opened with the next few weeks, while the Rumanian campaign is still undecided. However, I regard our chance for success there as excellent, and once Rumania is crushed, I think the path will be clear to consider the question of peace."

To illustrate what he regards as improving chances for peace, he referred to recent speeches of Lord Grey and Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg. He suggested a comparison between the utterances of these leaders a year ago and the present.

"Then," he said, "their respective standpoints were as far apart as the poles, but now, although the Rumanian campaign is still undecided, they are wide of agreement between them. The references to crushing Germany have been eliminated from the British pronouncement, and the agitation for annexation is dwindling in Germany."

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg, he went on, "has said in his latest speech, that he has never demanded the annexation of Belgium. Such instances as these show, in my opinion, that there are no real obstacles to a discussion on future peace. Of course, the Kingdom of Poland must stand, but I believe Russia can be brought to accept this."

Wilson as Mediator. Count Apponyi said he knew no reason why President Wilson should not be acceptable as an intermediary. "We feel, of course," he said, "that President Wilson has not treated us fairly, and that he has departed from the way of strict neutrality. But even though one does not like a person, that is no reason for rejecting his services, when these may be useful."

He declared that the western states of Europe must band themselves together for defense against Russia, which country he characterized as the great menace to the future peace of Europe and the Balkan campaign.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 14, via London, Nov. 15.—The following account of military operations on Macedonia was given out here officially today. "South of Lake Malik in Albania near the Greek border, our forces have attacked and drove back weak Greek detachments toward Corbata. Between Lake Presaba and the Monastir-Flora Railway, vigorous and bloody fighting took place. The enemy, the Kemal Colon, northeast of Monastir, after enemy attacks failed, with heavy losses. The enemy repeated his attack during the night of November 13, but was again repulsed. The foot of the Belasitsa Mountain and in the Struma Valley, there were no engagements, and weak artillery fighting."

TAKE HOTEL THIEF WITHIN HOUR AFTER JEWELS FOUND GONE

Young Man Ransacks Wilson Hotel Rooms Here But is Captured at Beloit Within Short Time.

Within an hour after Rhoda McCluskey, an employee at the Wilson Hotel, South River street, and the setting from her of a necklace belonging to her on the bed in the room of a stranger and determined that she had been the victim of a sneak thief. The young man, four or five years old, was the hands of the police, because George Miller, proprietor of the hotel, had presence of mind enough to report the robbery to the police. He was captured by the Beloit police and taken to the city on an interest in the case. Police Officer Peter D. Urban, Chief of Police, Peter D. Urban, armed with a warrant sworn to by Miller, left at two o'clock this afternoon to bring the prisoner back to Janesville. He also went along to identify the suspect.

The man came to the hotel last night. Dressed as the college boy would call "nifty," he presented himself as a commercial traveler and secured a room. He left this morning, after spending the night there.

Miss McCluskey entered the room he had occupied but for moments he had disappeared. Throwing back the quilts to make the bed, the pearl setting whizzed through the air, and its striking the wall, he bounded on the floor madly. He was seen to see if anything else was gone. A new jewel case containing her adornments was missing, called the police station and gave the description of the suspect. Officers Cain and Smith had met him and directed him to the hotel, where he was called in and ordered to hold the man if he was on the car, which had just left Janesville. Deputy Sheriff William Wogan and Officer Charles R. Handcut an automobile and searched the South Janesville hotels and the railway yards.

The young man was taken in Beloit, less than two hours after Miller told the police of the loss.

Three lavallieres, six ladies' rings, one pair of earrings and six dollars and fifteen cents and the back of a case of a small pin set with stones. He had ransacked the front rooms as Miss McCluskey worked on the same room last night. He had been in the room for three or four hours, but unfortunately for the thief, he dropped the setting from the earrings as he sized up the room, and in his haste, after breaking open the jewel case.

It is thought the man secured entrance to the rooms with the aid of a skeleton key. Miller, this noon declared that all doors were securely locked previous to the discovery of the robbery.

BOARD VOTES DOWN REMODELING PLANS

PROPOSAL FOR ALTERATION OF THIRD FLOOR OF COURT HOUSE LOST BY 22 TO 15 VOTE.

LIVERMORE IS TRUSTEE

Present County Treasurer Elected as Trustee of County Asylum and Poor Farm Succeeding Church.

The proposal to remodel the third floor of the court house to provide ample and suitable quarters for the county superior and for the circuit court room, entailing an estimated cost of $6,000, was defeated by the county board at its session this morning. The vote was 22 against and 15 in favor of the alterations, with two members absent.

The question of remodeling had been made a special order of business at the morning session, brought before the board by Supervisor McGowan, who offered the resolution providing that the work be done under the direction of the building committee and appropriating the sum of $6,000 for the work. Mr. McGowan explained the plans and blue prints which had been drawn up to remodel the character of the proposed changes and urged the necessity of providing more modern and up-to-date assembly rooms for the board and for the circuit court. The plans as presented, which made use of considerable space which is now being wasted, and in addition would leave that part of the court house completely unusable for additional remodeling of the other floors was later found advisable.

Supervisor Wheeler of Beloit questioned the wisdom of going ahead with remodeling one floor when it was evident that further alterations would be needed in the course of several years. Wheeler favored the idea of going forward with the entire work at once, but the majority of the board was considered at once. Then it would be advisable, he said, to continue with the remodeling of the third floor.

A short recess was taken to allow members to study the plans and to inspect the conditions as at present obtained on the third floor. When discussion was resumed, Architect William Blair heard and questions were answered. Supervisor Dalton of Clinton spoke in favor of a further investigation of the entire remodeling of the court house with final action postponed until the January meeting. Supervisor Paulson of Evansville brought up the question of vault room which was given consideration in the discussion. The vote was taken just before the noon recess and stood 22 to 15 against the remodeling proposition as proposed.

Previous to the consideration of the remodeling, the board unanimously elected F. F. Livermore, present county treasurer, who retires from his office in January, as trustee of the county asylum and poor farm for a term of three years. He succeeds A. M. Church, the incoming county treasurer. Mr. Livermore formerly served as a trustee of the business and is conversant with the business which the position entails.

Other elections this morning were L. M. WOULD LABEL CANS TO KNOW PEA SIZE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Milwaukee, Nov. 15.—Labels on cans of peas ought to tell the size of peas, Miss Ada M. Hunt of the department of economics of the University of Wisconsin told members of the Wisconsin Pea Canners' association at today's session of their convention.

"A housewife likes the size of the peas in a can and buys another can with the same label and gets a different size," says Miss Hunt. "The large peas have more nutritive value, and are appropriate for soup, while the smaller ones have a finer taste and are better for salad. Printing on the label each can a recipe for dish for which peas in can are appropriate, would be a good way to indicate the size of the peas."

It was also put forth by some speakers that the name of the canner should be placed on the label instead of the names of the commission houses.

COUNTY BOARD AT TRAINING SCHOOL

Members of Board Entertained at Luncheon—C. L. Harper of Madison Addresses Gathering.

Members of the County Board of Supervisors, together with the County Educational Board and the County Training School Board were guests of Superintendent E. J. Lowth at a luncheon given at the training school today. At which time the work of this organization and the need for such institutions was clearly pointed out to the visitors. Superintendent Lowth was the guest of honor in a forceful manner that the money they appropriate each year for the conduct of this school is used for good advantage.

An interesting reminiscence of the early days of the teachers' training school, Charles L. Harper, assistant state superintendent of schools, was told of the inauguration of the plan and the founding of the first school seventeen years ago. Mr. Harper has been connected with the state office for over twenty years, and is thoroughly familiar with every phase of education in Wisconsin; he has watched the development of the training school plan and has realized the specific need for this type of institution.

In his talk he traced the growth of the idea, and outlined their purpose, emphasizing the point that there was a need for a school in which country teachers were trained just as much as there was a need for Normal Schools to train high school teachers. He argued that the country school must meet the needs of the people and must be provided with teachers who understand these problems, women who have made a specialty of this type of work.

Mr. Harper concluded his talk with a description of how training schools, such as the one in this city conducted by Mr. Lowth, fit the needs of the country and specific problems of their work and are adequately fitted to meet them.

In addition to the address by Mr. Harper, Superintendent Lowth called on H. H. Faust, superintendent of the Janesville school system, for a few words on "How we can secure better trained and more efficient teachers."

Mr. Faust pointed out to the members of the county board just how they could help in this problem by making the rural teachers as happy and comfortable in their positions as possible, thus creating a greater incentive for young women to enter this field of endeavor rather than taking up stenographic positions in the business world. He maintained that by aiding them in their work, by encouraging them to take up special work in correspondence and business, the rural teachers could be made to realize the value of their positions, and could be given definite ideals that would result in greater efficiency. Mr. Faust also spoke of the work of training done by teachers' training schools, and voiced the thanks of the gathering for the opportunity of seeing what the Janesville school is doing.

In addition to the two talks made a number of pleasing musical selections were rendered by Grand Ole Opry, Beloit, and Richard K. Overton each sang a solo, and Miss Sarah Hickey played the piano.

Members of the boards, who were guests at the affair were much pleased with the work that is being done by the school, and with Mr. Lowth's energy in arranging the interesting program of today.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

Even California, which is admitted by the most versatile state in the union when it comes to supplying backgrounds for the motion pictures, cannot meet the requirements of every script which the fertile author conceals. In the case of "Unprotected," in which the director is starring, it was discovered to be impossible to find a turpentine camp which was required for a great many scenes in which Miss Sweet was to be shown as a convict hired out to work among negro prisoners.

This sort of thing is not done in California and is only practiced in the southern and southeastern states. As a result, the director in charge of the production was forced to make a trip east in order to obtain permission from the authorities to use one of the numerous prison camps of this type, which are found in the Carolinas and in the other southern states. The permission was granted, however, only on condition that the motion picture players be brought secretly to the camp and that only those who were to appear in the picture should be allowed to accompany the players.

Accordingly, Miss Sweet and her company departed from the studios one night and were gone for nearly three weeks, reappearing as mysteriously as they had gone. It was not until they had been back at the studio for two days that their mission and destination was discovered.

While at the turpentine camp they lived in a big plantation nearby, and Miss Sweet was forced to work as one of the convicts, with a keeper especially tolled off to instruct her in the gentle art of distilling turpentine.

It is seldom that a California producer has to go out of his own state in order to get a setting for his picture, but in this specific instance the players traveled a long way in order to get the setting for this picture.

Gertrude Le Brandt, the well-known actress, is playing all the motherly parts in Mary Miles Minter's pictures. In "Faith," the most recent of the little star's offerings, she played the role of the housekeeper who mothers the little lone orphan while Miss Minter interprets. She will also appear in "A Dream or Two Ago," just completed by Director James Kirkwood, and in "The Innocence of Lizette."

LIMIT TO TIME FOR MILITIAMEN TAKING THEIR NEW OATHS

War Department Is Alarmed by Many Refusals.—Must Enlist to Get Funds.—Local Company in Line.

One of the reasons for holding the quota of state guards at the Mexican border at the present time may be found in the fact that the war department is much disturbed over the failure of the guard regiments already returned to their homes to take the new oath of allegiance. This calls for three years with the colors and three years in reserve.

While the Second Separate Company of Janesville was mustered into the state service this last summer they were the first company in the state to take the new oath—not in the United States. Now they are drilling twice a week to make up the requisite number of actual drills that will qualify them for the pay which the enlisted men and officers will receive from the federal government under the new army law.

Their armory is well filled by enthusiastic guardsmen each drill night and the public are cordially invited to attend the Tuesday drills. Within a few days there will be suitable furniture installed in the rooms to add to the comfort and convenience of the members and visitors. This fund is being raised by contributions of business men by a special committee of the Commercial club and is being furnished to the state by citizens and business men. The sum of four hundred dollars is needed, nearly half of which has already been raised.

This fund will be expended to make the drill hall more comfortable, furnish the non-commissioned staff and company room, purchase supplies for the armory itself, including window shades and conveniences, and later to furnish and conveniences of the government will furnish the steel lockers in which the uniforms and equipment are kept and they will add materially to the appearance of the hall.

The Harry L. Gifford Camp of the United Spanish War Veterans have donated a clock and flags and some small articles of furniture and it is hoped the city will inspect the quarters and then make some donations. The government furnishes all the necessities for the enlisted men of the company, but does not furnish the armory proper, although paying a portion of the rent. The members themselves will donate their own clothing allowance toward this cause.

The company now numbers sixty-five, with three officers, and there is a prospect that the number will be increased materially within the next few weeks when the furniture is installed and the rooms can be used for club and room purposes. As this company is no under the new federal law there is no necessity about its enlistment. Dr. F. B. Paragorath is the examining surgeon and the recruits are put through a regular test before being admitted. The Washington dispatch which shows the concern of the general government as to the future of the volunteer service is as follows:

Alarmed by the refusal of thousands of national guardsmen to take the new oath prescribed by the Hay national defense act, requiring an enlistment of six years, the war department has fixed a time limit in which guardsmen must take the oath or withdraw from the national guard.

An order has just gone forward from the war department to the Col. G. W. Meyer, acting chief of the militia bureau, to adjutants general of all states which fixes Nov. 30, 1916, as the final date for taking the new oath and making the new contract with the United States. This includes troops returning from the border which have been mustered out and the 25,000 odd which were not sent to the border.

Troops now on the border and not yet mustered out have until the last day of the calendar month of November in which they are restored to state control to take the new oath.

Must Enlist to Get Funds.

The weapon which the war department will use to force national guard organizations to take the six year enlistment oath is withholding of federal funds.

"No funds appropriated under the provisions of the act of congress of June 3, 1916, can be expended on any part of the organized militia," Col. Meyer's letter says. "Upon muster out the war department cannot continue to recognize organizations which have failed to assume the national guard status, nor officers nor enlisted men who fail to comply with the act of June 3, 1916."

War department officials said today that they had reports showing many thousands of guardsmen had refused to take the new oath to obey the orders of the president and the governor of their state and to sign the new contract, which calls for an enlistment of three years with the colors and three years in reserve, less the period already served under the present enlistment contract.

Cannot Compel Enlistments.

The war department officials said, cannot force guardsmen to take the new oath to sign the new contract. If national guard companies fall below the minimum strength requirements by reason of refusal of guardsmen to comply with the law, company commanders will be required to recruit their organizations to strength. Failing in this the companies will be mustered out, officials said.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

Enid Markey, who plays the dominant female part in "War's Women," the remarkable De Luxe photo-play that comes to the New Myers Theatre for two days commencing today, is considered by critics one of the strongest emotional actresses seen today on the American screen. A high tribute to Miss Markey's ability as an actress is found in the fact she was selected by Thomas H. Ince, the noted director to play the principal female part in his $1,000,000.00 cinema spectacle, "Civilization."

Besides a personal charm, Miss Markey is credited with having remarkable ability in portraying emotional parts and, in this production of "War's Women," she is called upon for some exceptionally fine work. She plays the part of a beautiful girl who falls prey to a designing captain who upholds the right of the conqueror to demand of women of the vanquished whatever his fancy may suggest.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION GETS TRIAL IN HOLLAND

The Hague, Netherlands, Nov. 15.—The university extension movement has taken root in Holland and The Hague in the form of a "Volks," or People's, university, which proposes to throw open the doors of higher education to the slender purse.

This movement early made its way in America, and has subsequently spread widely in Europe. The idea has been in the minds of Dutchmen for a quarter of a century, and in same extent put into practice, but it took definite and concrete form when the first Dutch "Volks" university began its courses in the capital, Amsterdam, in 1912. This institution proved a big success and the war brought it yet more students, for many of those thrown out of employment entered the university.

The Hague has now followed Amsterdam's example, and just inaugurated its People's university. Seventeen hundred students have already been enrolled.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl twenty years old. I have two brothers. One is fifteen and works in a barber shop and the other is thirteen and works in a garage. Both live at home. They are making my mother and my life at home very unhappy. It seems they do not care for home. All they want is their board and room, for which they do not pay. When we don't have a meal ready when they arrive they are cross and scold us. They apparently have no brotherly love for me. They do not talk to us when in the house unless we speak first and then it is merely an answer. Will you please tell us what we can do to relate their affections and interest them in their home?

(2) I have been going with a fellow one year my junior, who lives in a small town about six miles from here. I do not know whether he goes with any other girls or not. He says he doesn't and I have no reason to believe he does. They are having a party here every Wednesday night. Another young man who is older than I am and who comes from near the same town, wants me to go to one with him. Do you think it would be right to go with him? I have been with him without the former knowing it.

(3) Is it a proper thing for a girl to go to her steady fellow's home and stay all night under any circumstances?

(4) Your mother should insist that you will have more respect for her than she does. You can do your part to avoid friction by having meals on time. Be patient when they scold and don't answer back. They are very young boys and with the proper treatment they will outgrow their meanness and disrespect. Your mother should not let them impose upon her. She should have it thoroughly understood that if they do not give her the respect and kindness which is due her they will have to leave the home. Perhaps they would enjoy their home more if they were encouraged to entertain friends there.

(5) I think it would be all right since you are not engaged. (6) If the boy lives at a distance and his mother extends the invitation it would be all right to stay.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am thirty years old. I got acquainted with a poor girl who boarded with wealthy people. I took her to my sister's house, and she told my sister that she would be happy if she had her own home. I had five hundred dollars and I bought her a diamond ring for a present. The rest of the money I spent for a house. After our wedding she was dissatisfied with the wages I made. To better our condition we decided that I should come here. I left her some money for expenses.

I started work in this town for fourteen dollars a week. I wrote her a letter that she should come. She wrote back that she would not be able to live on fourteen dollars a week. I sent her money a few times and I wrote her that if she would come I would send her any more money she needed. Months passed and I didn't get any letters and so I went to New York to see her. I found that she lives in an apartment house. I rang the bell and she came and told me that she will have nothing to do with me. I was aggravated and came back here. Now I feel crazy. I love her and it is a year since I have been away from her. Shall I try to get a divorce or shall I wait until she changes her mind and comes to me?

EDNA.

Household Hints

TRY A FEW HONEY RECIPES.

If honey is used instead of sugar, less honey is required; also less honey than sugar is used. The cake or cookie is improved in flavor and healthfulness with no increase in cost.

Baked foods keep much better with honey than with sugar. They will keep all the better in them, get rancid. Without butter they will keep indefinitely. Being made with honey will keep for months. All flavors blend well with honey.

Wherever sugar or syrup is used, honey may be substituted. Most cooking with honey should be done in a moderate oven.

The following recipes have been thoroughly tested by cooking experts. All measurements are level unless otherwise directed. Extracted honey is used.

Graham Pudding.
One fourth cup butter, two-thirds cup honey, one-half cup milk, one egg, one and one-half cups graham flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt, one cup seedless raisins. Beat butter, add honey, milk and egg well beaten; then add dry ingredients mixed and sifted, then the raisins. Turn into buttered mold, cover and steam two and one-half hours. Serve with any desired pudding sauce.

Graham Bread.
Three cups graham flour, one scant tablespoon salt, two-thirds cup honey, two cups sour milk, one teaspoon soda, pinch baking powder, nuts chopped fine.

Dissolve soda in sour milk, add honey, salt, then flour with the baking powder sifted in, adding more about if necessary. Add nuts last. Bake one and one-half hours in moderate oven.

Whole Wheat Bread.
One quart whole wheat flour (or you can mix one-half graham and half rye), one pint water (or half cup scalded cold milk), one large cooking spoon honey, one-half compressed yeast cake, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup egg.

In this recipe the honey is added to the yeast dissolved in lukewarm water. Proceed as in ordinary bread. This makes two loaves.

Pumpkin Pie.
Two cups steamed mashed pumpkin, one-third cup sugar, one cup honey, one-half cup sour milk, one teaspoon cinnamon, three cups rich milk.

Mix flour with sugar, add to pumpkin, stir in honey, spices and milk. This makes two pies.

German Christmas Cookies.
One quart honey, one quart sour cream, one tablespoon ground cloves, one tablespoon ground cinnamon, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sugar, one pint chopped nuts, one-half pound citron chopped fine, pinch salt, one pound brown sugar. Roll dough to roll nicely. Cut and bake like cookies.

Doughnuts.
One egg, one cup sweet milk, one cup honey, two tablespoons shortening, one teaspoon cream of tartar, one teaspoon soda, flour, pinch salt. Cream honey and shortening together, add egg well beaten, then other ingredients. Mix well, add enough flour to roll out and cut easily. Fry in hot lard. The honey makes doughnuts a delicious brown and keeps them moist much longer than when made usual.

Fruit Cake.
One-half cup sugar, one cup honey, one-half cup sour cream, one-fourth cup butter, one egg, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, one cup raisins, one cup currants, two cups flour. Cream together thoroughly the butter, honey and sugar. Add eggs well beaten, beat mixture, then add soda dissolved in the cream, then the flour. Mix in fruit and spices at the last. Turn into buttered and powdered tin and bake in moderate oven. Makes one medium-sized cake.

Delicious Icing.
Four tablespoons honey, white of one egg, lemon or chocolate flavor. Cook honey until ball is formed when dropped in cold water. Pour into the beaten white of the egg and whip till cool. Flavor.

THE TABLE.
Norwegian Prune Pudding—One-half pound prunes, two cups cold water, one cup sugar, one inch stick cinnamon, one and one-half cups boiling water, one-half cup cornstarch and one tablespoon lemon juice. Pick over and wash prunes, then soak one hour in cold water and boil until soft in same water. Then add sugar, cinnamon, boiling water and simmer ten minutes. Dilute cornstarch with enough cold water to pour easily, add to prune mixture and cook five minutes. Remove cinnamon and add lemon juice, pour in mold. Let cool. A thin hot fruit sauce can be used with this instead of cream.

THEY'RE EVEN SUPERVISING BABY NIPPLE DISTRIBUTION IN KAISER'S COUNTRY NOW

Berlin, Nov. 15.—To be sure that as a result of the rubber shortage in Germany many infants will not have to go without rubber nipples on the milk bottle, the Bundesrat has ordered that the entire available supply within the empire, and that are that of imports, shall be turned over to a specially created company that in turn is to have charge of the equitable distribution of this small but necessary article.

Mothers in future will be able to procure two nipples per child under one year of age, on presenting birth certificates to prove the age of the children and then will be able to buy new supplies by turning in the old ones. A maximum price of 35 pennings per nipple has been set for all that are made in Germany.

WOMEN'S LABOR LAW

IS MADE WORKABLE BY A NEW DECISION

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 15.—As now interpreted, the women's hours of labor law will prove a very workable piece of legislation. This was the statement of Charles H. Crownhart today after examining the new decision of the Wisconsin supreme court yesterday, and comparing it with the previous decision. Re-argument was held in this case on motion of Mr. Crownhart, who appeared as the attorney for the Wisconsin Federation of Labor, Wisconsin Consumers' League and Wisconsin Pica Cannery's association.

The original decision nullified the statutes of 1913 regarding the hours of labor for women so far as the attempt to give the industrial commission authority to classify employments of women and to limit the hours of labor therein on the basis of preservation of the women's health. The original act was an attempt to delegate to the industrial commission legislative powers conferred by the constitution exclusively on the legislature.

The decision as now modified, on a motion of the former decision and holds the act of 1913 valid. It confirms the power of the industrial commission to classify employments and fix the hours of employment in each classification based on the factors of labor in each employment as it affects the health of women. Such determination on the part of the industrial commission is held to be a finding of fact within the power of the legislature (to delegate).

The decision of the court as it now stands does not destroy (as did the former decision) the power of the industrial commission to properly administer its function with respect to the safety, act and apprenticeship act, child labor act and minimum wage act. As now interpreted the women's hours of labor will prove a very workable piece of legislation. The hours of labor for women in the hazardous, fatiguing employments may be shortened by the industrial commission, while the lighter and less tiresome employments the hours may remain as fixed by the legislature.

This power of the hands of the industrial commission wisely used will result in bettering the conditions of labor in many cases. Employers will readily improve their conditions of women rather than submit to short hours. The law furnishes the direct incentive for employers to make right working conditions for women in Wisconsin.

What's the hardest thing about your work? I asked a man who has recently branched out in business for himself.

"Waiting for the postman," he said (his orders come by mail). "or perhaps I should say, trying to keep my mind on something else while I'm waiting for the postman."

I wonder if there is anyone reading this who hasn't at one time or another suffered from that particular form of torture known as "waiting for the postman."

Perhaps You Were Waiting For a Love Letter.

Maybe, as in this case, it was a business letter; maybe it was an overdue letter from some loved one whose health or safety you were anxious about; maybe it was just some molehill like an expected invitation exaggerated into a mountain by the intensity with which you desired it; or maybe it was that most precious and ardently awaited freight of all the postman carries—a love letter.

But somehow, sometime, somewhere, I know you've waited for the postman.

And wasn't it the most temper trying, patience fraying job you ever had?

A Watched Pot Never Boils.

You try to be about your work and put him out of your mind, and behold you find yourself looking out of the window. There is no postman in sight. You strain your eyes hopefully, as if that would produce him out of the blackness.

You go back to your work. You hear a step coming up the street; you fly to the window again. It's some one else, and you feel an unconquerable dislike for this offending person. If the case is very acute your primitive ancestry stirs in you and suggests that it would be a relief to hurt something at him.

He Steps to Look Over His Mail.

Finally the postman actually comes into sight. He waves his way toward you from house to house, with the most maddening deliberation. He stops to look over his mail; he stops to pass the time of day with the grocer's man; he waits interminably at front doors.

At last he actually reaches the house next door. And then what does he do but stop and talk five minutes by the clock on the mantel (fifty by the one in your brain) with the lady next door. You always liked the lady next door, but you didn't understand now how you ever did.

Eventually he actually comes up your own front path. You spring the door. He fumbles in his bag and gives you—

Excuse me, but there is the postman's ring at last. I must answer it. Will you wish me good luck?

The Highflyers

Marjory Is Given an Opportunity to Learn What Other People Think of Her.

"I feel awfully sorry for him. He is a very decent fellow as men go." This speech was followed by a light chuck and a softer voice asked:

"Who was she, anyway?" a stenographer who got tired of earning a living, using him as a meal ticket. Why will men be such fools?" replied the first speaker.

"I hate injustice. I can't bear to see anyone wronged. She made the aunt, who was the only mother she ever knew, a regular target to her and now she's struck up and drowned the rest of the sentence.

Marjory Gerard sat near enough to the speaker, had not a screen between them, and saw him so convinced. She moved her chair so she could get a view of the next table through a crack, and whispered to her husband:

"Do you know those girls at the table through there, indicating which way he was to look."

"I can't see anything, but the back of a woman, so I can't tell," Tom scanned. "Why?"

"They were making hateful remarks about some other woman and she stopped."

"That's hardly the course to render them conspicuous. Don't all women do that?" she laughed a dry little laugh.

Her gorgeous raiment and jewels proclaimed about her husband's generosity," floated to Marjory's ears above the pianissimo music.

"Tom Gerard is not the man to stand her brazen extravagance always."

"I was the emphatic woman speaking now. Marjory's face flushed, and she made a motion to rise. Tom had caught his name and interpreted the motion.

"Set down. If people will use names in a public place, that is no reason why we should leave a dinner party hardly touched. Sit still till they go, and make no scene."

Marjory spread her napkin again and bit her lip to keep it from trembling.

"Men are such fools about women. You never can tell what one will do when he is in the toils. But mark my words, he can't keep up this pace for long. I know the family."

"It was the woman with the heavy voice that was speaking. Marjory stared at her and finally caught a glimpse of the side of her face.

"She has a face like a brick," she thought scornfully. "That kind of a woman never has a bit of sympathy for anyone."

"Yes, I got a glimpse of her face at last. I have known her for years. She was a friend of my oldest sister."

"Well, I like her sister's taste!" was the last answer.

PANEL 2: The man is climbing a steep, narrow staircase. A doctor in a top hat stands at the top of the stairs, looking down. The man says, "A GREAT DOCTOR ONCE SAID IF YOU WALK DOWN STAIRS ON YOUR HANDS BEFORE SAILING YOU'LL NEVER GET SICK."

PANEL 3: The man is sitting on a chair, reading a book. He is surrounded by a large stack of books. He says, "I'LL READ EVERY BOOK EVER WRITTEN ABOUT SEASICKNESS SO I'LL KNOW WHAT PRECAUTIONS TO TAKE."

PANEL 4: The man is lying in a bed, looking very ill. He says, "I'VE BEEN ON BOARD FIVE MINUTES AND I'M AS SICK AS A DOG."

PANEL 5: The man is sitting on the floor, eating fruit from a basket. A large, muscular man with a beard and a top hat stands over him, looking angry. The man says, "I'LL EAT THE FRUIT YOUR FRIENDS GAVE YOU BECAUSE I NEVER GET SEA-SICK AND NEVER DO ANYTHING TO PREVENT IT."

PANEL 6: The man is hanging from a large, wooden mast or rigging on a ship. He looks distressed. He says, "IT'S ALL WRONG, NEPTUNE, IT'S ALL WRONG."

"Oh!" she remonstrated. "You should not move!"

He forced a laugh between his clenched teeth.

"No, it's what I thought—only a scratch. All right now, except for a little dizziness, I have been imposing on your sympathy. Did you see where the shot came from? I must go and 'out out the rascal!'"

The girl grasped his rifle and sprang away from him.

"You shall not go," she declared. "I'm sure he ran away the moment you fell."

Hurdy straightened on his knees and rose unsteadily to his feet. His voice was as firm as his pose was tottery: "Be so kind as to help me to mount."

Hurdy turned his mare down the coulee. Marie, despite his protests, rode between him and the ridge behind which she had seen the blanketed man.

Unable to endure the jar of a trot or gallop, Hardy urged the mare to her steepest walk. They had gone less than a mile when a horseman came loping up the slope from Sioux creek.

"It's Mr. Vandervyn," said Hardy in a even tone.

"Yes," she replied. She looked back over her glasses, but did not nod at him until Vandervyn rode up.

The young man's face was flushed, as if he had been drinking. When he called up before them, he was seemingly so struck with Hardy's appearance that he scarcely heeded Marie's joyful greeting.

"What's the matter, captain?" he exclaimed. "You're as white as a ghost and your head tied up! You must have come a nasty cropper."

"Bit of an accident. Not serious," replied Hardy.

"It could not well have been closer," said Marie. "Captain Hardy has been out."

"Shot?" cried Vandervyn.

"The bullet grazed the bone above the temple. Had it been half an inch lower or farther back, it must have killed him."

"Half an inch," repeated Vandervyn, as face crimsoned, and the veins of his forehead began to swell. "Where the fellow? Did he get away? How long ago was it? Loan me the mare, Hardy. I'll run him down."

"Very good of you to offer," said Marie. "But the rascal might ambush us. We'll order out a squad of police. Besides, I wish your report on the trip. I presume Redben is at the agency."

"You found conditions still unfavorable?"

"Yes. All the chiefs took a violent dislike to you; and they had stirred up the whole tribe. Charlie and I talked it over, and you know a white man can't talk Indians into anything, if he tries at it."

"What result?" snapped Hardy.

Undervyn shrugged. "I know we made some impression, especially on Thunderbolt. The chiefs no doubt would be willing to let you visit the camps on safe conduct, so to speak; I doubt if they could keep the wildness of the young bucks in hand. This is our only hope. I tell you, captain, that if we move it, the whole business of us here would think any the better of you if you cut the whole business."

"I shall start for the mountains tomorrow."

"Unless I decide to accept his proposal," Vandervryn stared at her critically. "You needn't try to rag me, Marie." She smiled. "So you do doubt what I say. Yet it is true. Captain Hardy would me the honor of declaring that he wished to marry me."

"Hardy asked you?—he, a captain in the regular army?"

"And I a quarterbreed, the daughter of my father. Amazing, is it not?"

Vandervryn caught himself up as he saw the proud humility of her expression. It was a new look to him. He had often seen her proud, but never humble. His jealousy flared: "How did you answer him? You didn't accept!"—you refused the old board-back!"

"Yes and no, that is, not yet," the girl tensed.

Vandervryn stepped close and grasped her arm.

"Be so kind as to release me, Mr. Vandervryn."

"You coquette! You're trying to play me against him."

"So that is what you think of me?" The girl wrenched herself free and turned from him haughtily.

He stepped forward, and again grasped her arm. His voice shook with jealous anger: "You shall have nothing to do with him! He shall not have you!"

"Indeed! May I ask what right you have to dictate?"

"You love me, that is why," he flung back at her. "You love me, Marie. You can't deny it." His voice sank to a deep, ardent, golden note that sent tremor through her. "You are mine—mine! You know it. Your arm quivers—that look in your eyes! You cannot hide your love, Marie—sweetheart!"

He sought to embrace her. But again she wrenched herself free from him. She could no longer feign hauteur. Her face was rosy with blushes; her bosom heaved; her eyes, behind their veiling lashes, glowed with tender passion. Yet she kept her head despite the intoxicating ardor of his look. Unlike Olma, she was not so unsophisticated as he persisted in thinking her.

"You take a good deal for granted, Mr. Vandervryn," she attempted a mocking tone. "I am not yet your sweetheart, nor am I so sure I shall

She swayed toward him, checked herself in the act of yielding, and concluded his grasp.

"No!" she cried. "You're a bit too sure. I've no mother, halfbroed or otherwise, to advise me, my dear Reginald. I must be my own chaperone. You charge Captain Eardry with trying to play the seducer. When he spoke to me to love he also spoke of marriage."

Vandervuyl's eyes narrowed and as quickly widened in their most childlike stare.

"How can you, Marie?" he reproached. "You say that as if you think I have been trifling with you all these months. When you know as well as I — But of course, if you do not trust me, I have no show against him. I am free. I am, as you know, tied down by the uncertainty of my posi-

"Whether or not there is any uncertainty about my position, I am not bound to anyone, nor am I bound to blind myself to anyone."

"Why are you so hard to me?" he pleaded. "You know that if my uncle told me even a hint that I am interested in a girl out here it would be all off with me. He doesn't know what you are like, and it would be impossible in trying to convince him how charming you are."

"What a misfortune! Only, as it happens, I have no wish to marry Senator Clemmer. He already has a wife."

"That's just it—a wife and half a dozen daughters. It's all cut and dried that I am to marry Ella, the oldest unmarried one."

"Ah—so that is why—" faltered Charlie, the rich color ebbing from her cheeks. But she was only momentarily overcome. Her spirit rallied almost as soon as it drooped. "It is the best kind of you, Mr. Vandervyn, to tell me the delightful secret. Permit me to congratulate you."

His brows peaked in a doleful frown. "You are cruel to take it that way. I don't love the girl. You ought to know that—you do know it! Can't you see a hole I'm in? Even if it wasn't for Ella, they'd all think of you as a—an agency, girl. I wouldn't stand a ghost in a show of being appointed agent when Hardy quits."

"Does he intend to quit?"

"If you turn him down, he'll leave it up to you as soon as he finds the tribe still against him. Then—don't you see, sweetheart?—I shall get the appointment as agent. Your father and I can go into the little old mine as fast as we please. It's a real mine, sweetheart. In a few months we'll have enough ore shipped to the smelter for us to cut loose from my uncle and me as I please. You know what that means."

Again he came toward her, his eyes glowing, his arms open to embrace her. And again she eluded him, this time with no hesitancy or wavering. Her smile showed she was once more in control of her emotions.

was in a terribly run-down condition. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it built me up in shape and cured me of the weakness which had so long troubled me. I am glad to commend this medicine to Mrs. Chas. Horn, 1327 S. 4th Street.

An eminent medical authority writes that most city folk die of a thickening of the arteries or of Kidney disease. The kidneys become clogged, do not filter the poisons from the blood, and one trouble follows another, high blood pressure damages the heart, arteries and kidneys. Usually no danger signals are backache, pain here or there, swollen feet or ankles, rheumatic twinges or spots appearing before the eyes. The best test is this: Eat meat but once a day, or not at all. Plenty of outdoor exercise, and drink pure water frequently. Before meals take Anuric, the great uric acid neutralizer, obtainable at drug stores. When you have dizziness, chills or sweating, worry, or dragging leg pains in the evening, it is wonderful enough to uric acid, which Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered and named Anuric. Many times more potent than lithia, dissolves uric acid as hot water does sugar.

WORLD SERIES FOR BOWLERS PROPOSED

A world series in bowling has been proposed. Nothing resembling a world series for the knights of the alley has been tried since Garry Hermann fathered such an affair several years ago. Bowling would like to see it given a trial.

Even though the National Bowling association organized a few years ago in opposition to the A. B. C. is dead, there will be a sufficient number of tournaments this year to make it worth while to bring the winners of these meets together in a final blow-off. The A. B. C. has been organized such an event, claiming its championship to be the equal of a world series. However, times have changed, and perhaps the American Bowling Congress would no longer frown upon such an affair.

Among the tournaments scheduled this year are the A. B. C. at Grand Rapids, Atlantic Coast, Middle West, Pacific Coast, Southern, International of Minneapolis, Northern Illinois, Windy City, Greater Chicago and various other smaller tournaments.

LOCAL BOYS STARRING ON FOOTBALL TEAM AT KENOSHA THIS SEASON

Joe Finnegan and George Viney, former members of the Janesville Red Sox baseball team, and also known for their prowess as players of the gridiron sport, are again this year playing football with the Holton Bulldogs, a fast Kenosha team, which has yet to be defeated after meeting the Lake Shore has to offer, even going to Milwaukee, where several victories were secured after extremely hard fought games. Sunday the Kenosha team defeated the Racine Maroons, 12 to 0. Both Finnegan and Viney scored touchdowns, but due to a strong wind and necessary kickouts after touchdowns, missed both goals.

ONE ARMED MAN STAR ON DARTMOUTH TEAM

When Pat Spears, Dartmouth's all-American guard for the last two years was declared ineligible for wrestling football this fall, nobody thought that a member of last year's freshman team could step in and fill his shoes, but that is just what Gene Neely, a big sophomore from Texas, has been doing in the first four games on the Greens' schedule. And what makes Neely's feat the more remarkable is the fact that his right arm is cut off above the elbow.

Because of his wonderful success in overcoming this tremendous handicap, Neely has won his way into the hearts of the supporters of Dartmouth's big football machine until he has become easily one of the most popular men to wear the green on the gridiron in years. He has been replaced by a substitute toward the end of all the games thus far played, not because of inability but because the opposition has been so weak that Cavanaugh has used his second and third-string men to finish the first four starts, and when he trotted off the field in each game he received a deafening ovation from the stands.

MORRIS MILLER

That there is to be some wholesale cutting of salaries by both major leagues before the next season opens is assured. It is the National League, however, which will do most of the salary slicing, for it was the Tanager league which suffered most by reason of the advent of the Federal league. Its salaries were forced up to an alarming amount, and now that these contracts have mostly expired, the league is trying to reduce so that again it will be possible for a club which finishes in the second division to make a healthy profit on its investment.

The American league will not have as much cutting to do as its rival, but there will be enough of it done to cause the usual howl from the players. The magnates say they do not propose to be unjust. They are willing, they say, to pay the players what they are worth. But they do not think that many of the athletes are worth $6,000, $8,000 and $10,000, which has been paid for the past two years.

Fleider Jones of the St. Louis Browns will make many changes in his team before next spring, it is understood. Jimmy Austin and Alfie will be sold or traded while Eddie Plank has notified Jones that he wants to be traded because he cannot stand the climate of St. Louis. The announcement that Austin and Miller are to be cut loose comes in the nature of a surprise, for this pair of players did brilliant work last season, but it may be that both are declining in salary. Fleider Jones thinks they are worth. Austin it will be remembered, jumped to the Reds and then jumped back again. He undoubtedly grabbed a two-year contract at a big figure which still has a year to run. There is not much chance to see such players, however, for all the clubs are ducking the high salaried fellows.

It is understood a new players' contract is to be adopted this winter by the two major leagues. There is some anxiety as to the number of changes and the character of them, but it is certain they will be explicit as to what the players are to do during the off season, and there is a likelihood that the contracts will be changed from a six to a twelve-month agreement. This is a change which many of the club owners have been anxious to adopt for some time in that it gives them control of their players the year around, and adds other benefits necessary to put the game on a sounder basis.

Frank Bancroft, one of the greatest figures in the history of baseball, and who, although seventy-six years of age, is one of the most energetic and enterprising business managers in the country, is going to give baseball lectures, illustrated by films, in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky towns. It almost broke the pioneer's heart when the commission frowned on his entertaining trips, and he has turned to lecturing, so as not to be idle in the winter months.

The Cubs spent money like sailors on shore leave this year, but now the directors have gone to the other extreme and will watch the shekels closer than a pawnbroker. It is said Joe Tinker will have to stand a cut of salary from $12,000 to $8,000, if he wants to hold his place.

Hub Perdue will no more add to the gaiety of baseball. Hub announces from his home in Gallatin, Tenn., that he has quit and will devote himself to his business in Gallatin. He has a restaurant and confectionary there that is prospering.

INAUGURAL BALL IS RETURNED TO PLACE AS STATE FUNCTION

Mrs. Wilson's Arguments Are Said to Have Overcome President's Prejudice Against Social Affair.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—President Wilson's opposition to the old custom of holding an inaugural ball has been overcome, it is stated here on good authority, by the persuasiveness of Mrs. Wilson. The First Lady of the Land enjoys functions of the sort, and there is joy in Washington at the news.

Four years ago President Wilson started his career of precedent breaking by calling off the inaugural ball a step which was not appreciated here at all. The ball has always been a big money maker and resulted normally in reimbursing those who had contributed to the decorations and other expenses incidental to the inauguration.

The information that there is to be a ball this year comes from a friend of Mrs. Wilson. Mrs. Wilson had decided on the ball some weeks ago, it is said, but did not care to have it mentioned until after the election for obvious reasons.

It is said that the president's original opposition to the ball was based on a misconception, which has been corrected by Mrs. Wilson.

Washington is due for a dry inauguration period, probably the first in the history of the country. A law which became effective March 4, 1913, the day President Wilson was inaugurated, prohibited the sale of liquor in the District of Columbia on Sunday and inauguration day.

As March 4 this time falls on Sunday, there will be two dry days in succession, as the inaugural ceremony will be March 5. Thus forewarned those voters of the arid west who joined their brothers of the dry south with "em if they want to lick up" on inauguration day in Washington. The neighboring state of Virginia became "dry" Nov. 1 and a large section of Maryland a day later.

To enter a saloon in Washington on either of the two days mentioned will be as easy as breaking into the vaults of the United States treasury. There is "nothing doing" for the "boys" who may want to celebrate in the old fashioned way for fifty-five hours, at least, in Washington.

On the day of this discovery comes another—that the "drys" might be able to put through the next congress the resolution submitting a constitutional

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEYS BIG CAUSE OF FIRES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Nov. 15.—Defective chimneys, lightning and thrashing engines were the chief causes of fires reported to State Fire Marshal M. J. Cleary during the month of October. Of the fires reported that month thirty-five were due to chimneys, entailing a loss of $36,065; twenty-one to lightning, with a loss of $29,045; and twenty to thrashing engines, with a loss of $24,500. The largest individual losses, however, came from other causes. The total number of fires reported was 240, with total losses of $492,045. This record is close to that of September, when the number of fires reported was also 240 and the total losses $440,025. In October, 1915, 218 fires were reported, with aggregate losses of $381,120.

Classified by occupancy, dwelling fires led in number with 94 losses, totaling $66,235. Barn fires came next, the number being 66 and the losses $110,370. Six warehouse fires entailed losses of $75,100 and three factory fires losses of $63,835. Fires of unknown origin were forty-one, with losses of $204,850.

Among counties, Milwaukee led with twenty-eight fires and losses of $144,465. Four cities in St. Croix county caused losses of $101,000. Crawford county had five fires, with losses of $13,650. In Racine county six fires caused losses of $8,860.

BORDER VETERANS EDUCATE ROOKIES ALONG MANY LINES

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 15.—In enumerating the beneficial results of the mobilization of national guardsmen upon the border someone has dwelt upon the educational advantages.

"Everyone of the hundred-odd thousand militiamen," they say, "will go back to his home with a clearer knowledge of a new section of our country and an understanding of the Mexican situation."

So as soon as the tents are up and he can get "town leave" the newly arrived guardsman buries down to learn all he can about the Mexicans and the "situation" see the famous International bridge and catch a glimpse of the turbulent country up the river end. It is a thrilling experience—of the "guardie" has imagination. The soldiers of the patrol turnish the educational features.

At first sight the bridge is a bit disappointing. It is a rickety wooden affair. And the silvery Rio Grande mentioned frequently in the popular songs is a distinct shock. It is neither silvery nor grand. At this season of the year it is a mere thread of dirty water meandering over the sandy river bed. Usually a dozen naked Mexican children are attempting to get wet, or drier.

"Hull" sneered a Pittsburgh guardsman, "it isn't near as dirty as our river. With two blotters I could blot up their dinged river."

It is significant after the first sight of the stream, the new-comers insist upon calling it "their river."

After gazing silently at the clusters of drab adobe huts sprawling on the sides of the barren mountain back of the town the newcomer has a lot of questions to ask. This is where the education begins.

"See, pard, are there many bandits over there?"

The nonchalant militiaman on patrol regards the seeker after knowledge with scant interest. He is a veteran of the border service. These "rooks" annoy him. He has been on the border three months.

"Ain't it kinda dangerous down guard duty across from 'em?" purrs the undaunted seeker after knowledge.

"Wal, yes," yawns the veteran. "Yes, we do have a lotta trouble with them bandits. But one gets used to it in time."

The seeker after knowledge throws an apprehensive glance at the other side. It looks quiet enough. Scores of shapeless women are hovering in the first cooking meals on the shady bank. Vendors of vegetables and

TRY GERMAN CONSUL IN 'FRISCO BOMB CASE

San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Trial of members of the German consular corps and others charged with violating American neutrality as to begin today in the federal district court. Charges of dynamiting a barge loaded with Russian munitions, and of sending supplies from there to the German squadron, are made against these defendants: Franz Bopp, German consul general; Baron E. H. von Shack, vice-consul; Baron Wilhelm von Brincken, German military attaché; Charles C. Crowley, German consulate secret; service man; Margaret W. Cornell, Crowley's secretary, and a number of business men.

The dynamiting of the munitions occurred in May, 1915, as the barge was being prepared to lighter the munitions for shipment to Vladivostok. The government contended that the explosion was caused by a bomb planted at the instance of the defendants. The defendants deny guilt.

The second charge, which has been combined with the first, is that the German consulate officials, with local business men, sent the steamer Sacramento to sea with a cargo of coal for the vessel of Admiral von Spee's squadron, later destroyed in the Falkland Islands battle. The Sacramento later interned in a South American harbor.

Strenuous objection was made by the defense to the combining of the two cases. It was contended that the charges are vastly different and that by combining them the work of securing a fair jury is rendered vastly more difficult, owing to increased occasion for imposed prejudice against Germans.
